

Please keep your nose out of wisconsin's decision to have a "no call" list and rules of its own. I highly value the time I have had relatively free of interruptions from telemarketers since signing up for the no call list in my state. I work fulltime and pay plenty of taxes. If the bankers don't like it I don't care. I have a right for my time to be free of their advertising. Let them use TV, radio, and print. I can turn those off or not look at them. My phone is for my use and for my friends and family to contact me. I am not responsible to accept or pay for their calls. If they can figure out a way to pay me IN ADVANCE at $50 per hour for their interruptions, then I might think about whether I want to listen to their advertisements. Please leave our rules alone. States have the right to decide this for their citizens. If I wanted to listen to tele-marketers I wouldn't be on the no-call list!
